Notes for CHARLES JAMES DANFORTH:

from 1906 Miner's History of Richland County, by Judge James H. Miner:

CHARLES J. DANFORTH, who is now living retired on his fine homestead farm, in the town of Forest, has had a somewhat varied and eventful career, having followed different occupations in many different states of the Union and having served his country with marked gallantry as a soldier in the Civil War. He has gained success through his own efforts, is one of the substantial citizens of Richland county and has the unqualified esteem of his fellow men. Mr. Danforth was born in the city of Providence, R. I., on Nov. 28, 1842, and is a son of Charles and Julia F. (Ward) Danforth, the former of whom was born in Providence, R. I., in 1815, and the latter in Massachusetts, in 1819. As a young man the father went to Massachusetts, where he became superintendent of a cotton factory. After his marriage he returned to his native city, where he was engaged in teaching school for a number of years. In 1849, he was of the intrepid argonauts who made the journey to California and he was thus a member of the immortal "Forty-niners" who initiated the gold-mining industry in that state. He remained about two years and then returned to his home in Providence. About June, 1852, he removed with his family to Meigs County, Ohio, the subject of this sketch having been nine years of age at the time. In 1864 he removed from Ohio to Mattoon, Ill., and Dec. 24, 1866, he took up his residence at Lone Rock, Richland County, Wis., where he conducted a wagon shop for the ensuing four years. He next located at Charles City, Iowa, where he made his home for some time, passing the closing years of his life in his native city of Providence, where he died July 5, 1901. His wife died in 1904, at Charles City, Iowa. Of their five children three are living. He was first a Whig and later a Republican in politics and was a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, his wife holding membership in the Methodist church. He was a son of Walter R. Danforth, who was a native of Providence and a son of Job Danforth, who was a soldier in the Continental line in the War of the Revolution and who died at the patriarchal age of ninety-seven years. Walter R. Danforth was educated for the legal profession but never followed the same. For many years he was editor of a paper in Providence, and his son Charles learned the printer's trade. The maternal grandparents of the subject of this review were Samuel and Nancy Ward, and both passed their entire lives in Massachusetts, Mr. Ward having been a shoemaker by trade. Charles J. Danforth, whose name initiates this article, received his early education in his native city and thereafter he attended school at intervals in Meigs County, Ohio, where he assisted his father in clearing a farm of 200 acres, upon which was also operated a sawmill. Oct. 8, 1861, he enlisted as a private in Company C, Sixty-third Ohio Volunteer infantry, with which he was in active service until about seven months before the close of the war, when he was taken ill and incapacitated for duty, receiving his honorable discharge when the war came to an end in victory for the Union Arms. He took part in many important engagements, including the battle of Island No. 10 and the siege of Corinth. He is an appreciative member of the Grand Army of the Republic. After the war he joined his parents in Illinois and accompanied them on their removal to Richland County, Wis., in December of the following year, being associated with his father in the work of the wagon-shop about four years. He later became superintendent of a hoop factory at Lavelle, Sauk County, holding this position two years, passing the next year in Hall County, Neb. He thereafter was engaged in work as a carpenter and painter at Spencer, Iowa, for four years, then settling in Faulk County, S. D., where he became the owner of 480 acres of land, to the cultivation of which he devoted his attention for the ensuing decade, at the expiration of which, in 1892, he returned to Richland County, Wis., and bought a farm of 110 acres of M. V. B. Richards, in the town of Forest, also buying three acres of land in the village of Viola. He also conducted a general store in Viola for two years, thereafter giving his attention to the management of his farm until 1904, since which time he has lived essentially retired, though remaining on his farm, which is one of the well improved places of this part of the county, the farm being rented. In politics Mr. Danforth is aligned in the ranks of the Republican party but he has never sought office, though he served as an officer of his school district while residing in South Dakota. In December, 1875, Mr. Danforth wedded Miss Anzonette R. Davidson, who was born in Indiana, in 1854, a daughter of Samuel and Sarah Davidson, who came to Sauk County, Wis., in 1867, later removing to Faulk County, S. D.; the father passed the closing days of his life at Ladysmith, Wis., where he died in 1903 and where his widow still maintains her home. In conclusion is entered brief record concerning the children of Mr. and Mrs. Danforth: Clyde, who was born Sept. 28, 1876, is a successful merchant at Viola; Audrey Luella, who was born Dec. 16, 1882, was graduated in the Viola high school and now assists her brother in his store; Eula F., who was born Sept. 18, 1885, and who was educated in the public schools of Viola, remains at the parental home, as does also Leo C., who was born Nov. 15, 1894.
